HONG KONG BALLET TO BRING HISTORIC PERFORMANCE TO WASHINGTON, DC

WHO: Hong Kong Ballet - Stephen Jefferies, Artistic Director
Hong Kong Economic and Trade Office - Jacqueline Ann Willis, Hong Kong
Commissioner for Economic and Trade Affairs, USA

WHAT: Hong Kong Ballet performing The Last Emperor

WHEN: 7:30pm on Tuesday, May 25, 2004

WHERE: Warner Theatre
13th & E Streets, N.W.
Washington, DC

The Hong Kong Economic and Trade Office is proud to feature Hong Kong Ballet as Hong Kong's cultural ambassador to the United States. The Last Emperor is an original work created by the Hong Kong Ballet and premièred in 1997 to celebrate the return of Hong Kong's sovereignty to Mainland China. The Washington, DC performance is part of Hong Kong Ballet's four-city North American Tour, which includes Toronto, Vancouver and San Jose.

Mr. Jefferies was voted Dancer of the Year by Dance and Dancers magazine. Most recently, he has been voted by Dance Europe (February 2004) one of the top artistic directors in the world.

Miss Willis is the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region Government's most senior representative in North America.

Both will be available for interviews before and after the performance. To request an interview or media tickets to the performance, please call Kelley Mullaney at 202/530-4628.

Founded in 1979, Hong Kong Ballet is now one of the foremost classical ballet companies in Asia. Under the artistic direction of Stephen Jefferies, it has also built an international reputation with successful tours to Mainland China, North America, Europe and other parts of Asia. The Company presents a broad-based repertoire, covering both classical works as well as new and original works with Chinese themes, such as The Last Emperor, The White Snake and Mu Lan and Legend of the Great Archer. In keeping with its artistic policy, the Company's 40 dancers come from diverse background, although the majority are from Hong Kong, Mainland China and other Asian countries. THE NEW SILK ROAD:
AMERICAS' COMPANIES JOURNEY EAST – NOT JUST NORTH & SOUTH – FOR GREATER BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY
By Jacqueline Ann Willis

The countries of North and South America can take considerable pride in the Americas Conference as it showcases many of the factors making the region such an attractive business destination. As trade and investment increasingly cross the Pacific Ocean, a new Silk Road has emerged. This one links the markets, capital and peoples of the Americas with China, much as the old Silk Road linked China with Europe and fostered not just a trade for silk but also the exchange of new ideas and innovations.

The presence of a delegation from China at this conference and the spotlight on Chinese companies in the Americas show that people worldwide are exploring Latin America in search of growing opportunities and markets. As the Hong Kong Government's most senior representative in the United States, I join you in wishing the conference every success, particularly in generating many new business opportunities.

Companies in Florida have traditionally looked toward Latin America for business partnerships, just as many Latin American companies have looked north to the United States. Ties of geography, language and culture have led many a U.S. company to "look South." Indeed, Florida is the No. 1 trading "partner" of most countries in the region. A strong trading dynamic within Latin America also exists, again understandable given the many ties that bind the countries of the region.

While continuing to "look South and North," the smart businessperson increasingly looks "East" to Asia as well. Some companies – large, medium and small – are doing just that, as more businesses in Latin America, as well as here in Florida and other U.S. states, take advantage of Hong Kong as the gateway to China.

The language, cultural and other ties that are so important between much of the southern U.S. states and Latin America are absent in dealing with Asia-Pacific. So in considering whether to "look East," there are important questions and issues that companies deserve to have addressed.

The first, and most basic, question is about governance. On July 1, 1997, Hong Kong became a Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China under the concept of "One Country, Two Systems." This change gave Beijing responsibility for Hong Kong's defense and foreign policy, but maintains Hong Kong's distinct western-based life style, open and free market economic system, transparent common law-based legal system, impartial judiciary and adherence to the rule of law, including protection for intellectual property. With this legal and economic infrastructure in place, Hong Kong's role as business partner for China also makes it the leading regional headquarters location for businesses worldwide.

Location, as we all know, also matters. Located on China's southeast coast, Hong Kong sits at the doorstep of 1.3 billion Chinese consumers and all major Asia-Pacific markets. With half the world's population within a five hour flight, Hong Kong is also uniquely positioned to help Americas' businesses gain a bigger foothold and "first mover" advantage in doing business with China.

The more I thought about it, the more convinced I became that Hong Kong has much in common with the dynamism of the Americas, perhaps best represented by Miami. Both are vibrant hubs for regional commerce. Both enjoy an international mind-set; educated and skilled populace; strategic location; world-class communications, transportation, and financial services infrastructure; and a balanced outlook toward work and play. Indeed, business people from Miami to Rio would feel at home amidst the skyscrapers and entrepreneurs of Asia's world city.

Hong Kong's commercial and legal environment is decidedly pro-business. The Heritage Foundation, a noted think tank, has ranked our economy the freest in the world 10 years in a row, and counting. As host to multi-national firms or small enterprises, Hong Kong offers all the ingredients needed for success: access to key markets, partners, funding, expertise and an unmatched trading network.

Recently, steps have enhanced opportunities for companies to sell into mainland China's markets. Under the landmark 2003 Closer Economic Partnership Arrangement (CEPA) – a free trade agreement between mainland China and Hong Kong – Hong Kong-made products and Hong Kong-based companies enjoy preferential access to mainland China ahead of China's commitment to the WTO. And importantly, a company from Latin America, or anywhere in the world, would be eligible to enjoy the tremendous benefits under CEPA if it has "substantive business operations" in Hong Kong thereby enabling it to qualify as a Hong Kong company. CEPA provides Hong Kong companies with the "first mover" advantage into mainland China and has already proved to be especially important to firms in the services sector, such as banking, insurance, securities, and transport and logistics.

Hong Kong is the ideal platform from which Americas' companies can tap into this very desirable market. Companies that move quickly will be well positioned when world attention focuses eastward on the 2008 Olympic Games in Beijing. More of Americas' companies, whether based in Miami or elsewhere in the region, would do well to consider a similar shift, continuing their natural inclination to "look South or North," while looking "East" to Asia as well. The new Silk Road beckons. Hong Kong is the new Silk Road.

Miss Willis is the Hong Kong Commissioner for Economic and Trade Affairs in the United States. She is the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region Government's most senior representative in the United States.
